

WELCOME AND UPDATE

Thank you for taking the time to visit our online exhibition on the emerging proposals to expand ExCeL London.

Our Proposals

We would like to thank you for taking part in the first consultation, and attending our public webinar earlier this month. We appreciate your comments and questions on the proposals for the expansion of ExCeL London – which we are calling ‘Phase 3.’

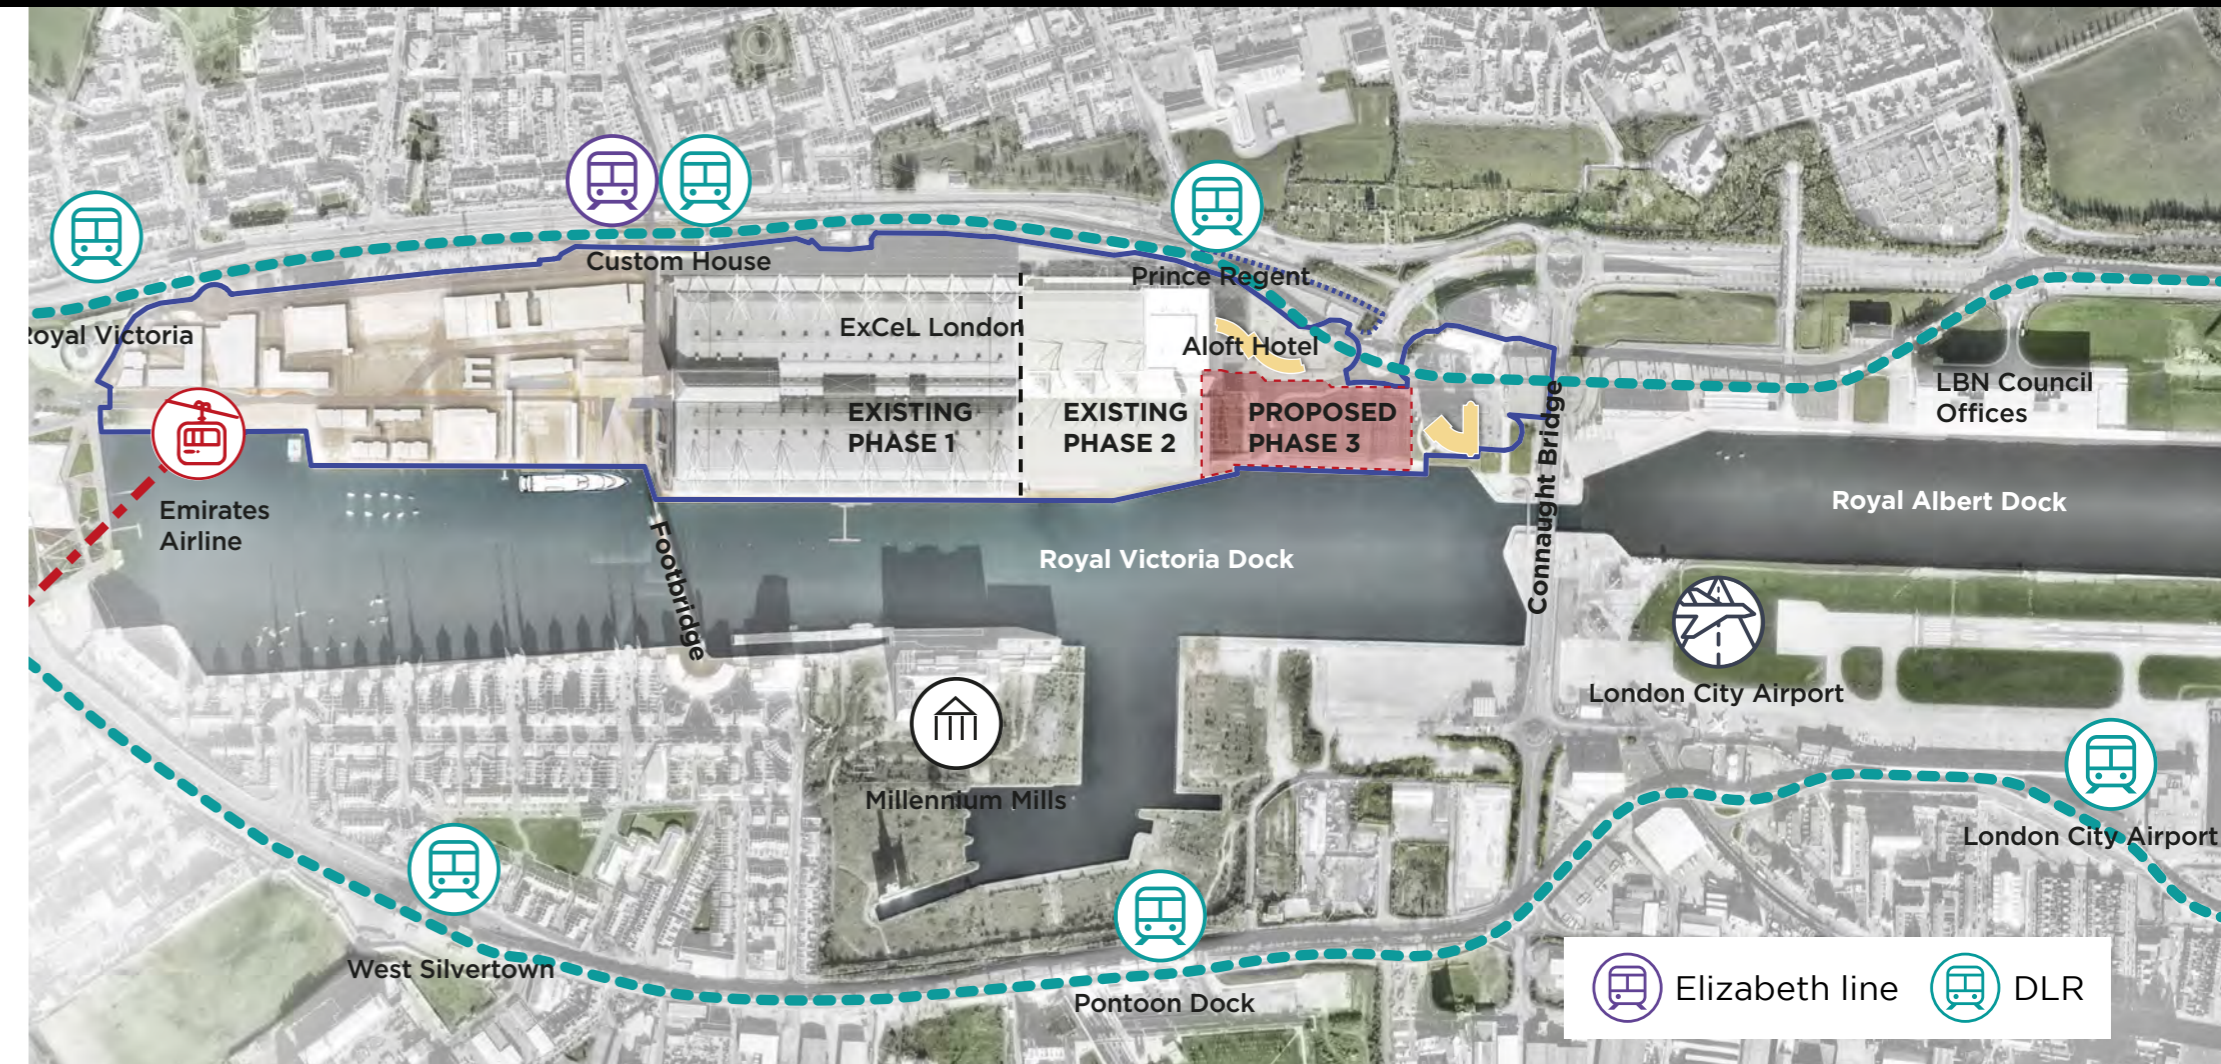

Over the past few weeks, we have been reflecting on the feedback and have updated the plans to present a project that will ensure ExCeL can compete internationally and remains a destination of choice for world-leading events.

We are focused on ensuring that our planned expansion will support the sustainable growth of the Royal Docks as a social and economic hub, with a modern, vibrant dock-edge, improved public realm and new pedestrian and cycling connections.

About ExCeL London

ExCeL London’s beginnings can be traced back to 1988, when the Association of Event Organisers (AEO) first approached architect Ray Moxley to locate and design a new exhibition and conference centre within the M25. The Royal Victoria Docks site was identified in 1990 and we opened in November 2000 as one of Europe’s largest regeneration projects. In 2010 we opened our Phase 2 expansion – London’s International Convention Centre (ICC), which was designed by Grimshaw Architects, who are also leading on the Phase 3 proposals.

ExCeL London is a global leader in exhibitions, international congresses and live events. We are owned by ADNEC (Abu Dhabi National Exhibition Centre) and have now been part of the Royal Docks for over 20 years.

Have your say

We are launching our final stage of public consultation on the proposals. This is your opportunity to see the changes we have made to the plans for Phase 3, and for you to have your say, and for you to make further comments and recommendations.
